DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000. Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

Claims 19 and 30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Chee, et al.

In figures 1 and 9a-9d, the Chee, et al., Patent shows a catheter for delivering fluid to tissue having an injection catheter comprising a shaft having a proximal end, a distal end and an infusion lumen extending therethrough, a high pressure source, an injection port at the distal end of the injection catheter in fluid communication with the infusion lumen, wherein the high pressure source is in fluid communication with the infusion lumen and is sufficient to cause the fluid to pass through the injection port and enter the tissue.

In relation to method claim 19, the cited patent teaches the steps of providing a pressurized fluid to an injection catheter, inserting the injection catheter into the patient, navigating the injection catheter until the distal end is positioned adjacent to an injection site, and injecting the fluid into the tissue.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 20-29 and 31-37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chee, et al. The Chee, et al., Patent does not disclose pressure ranges of 5000 to 7000 psi. However, the examiner argues that it is a well-known scientific fact that modifications to the resulting injection capability can be achieved by altering the pressure of the catheter infusion system and the structural design of the nozzle at the distal end of the catheter. Moreover, the infusion pressure at the distal tip is determined by the characteristics of the tissue in the area where the catheter is being used within the body. Therefore, for a person of ordinary skill in the art, modifying the system infusion pressure of the Chee, et al., Patent to prevent injury as the infusion catheter is utilized in different areas of the body would have been considered an obvious design alternative.
